INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNOLOGY INTEGRATION AND SELF-DIRECTED LEARNING: A DYNAMIC DUO FOR EDUCATION

05/01/22

Dr. Sherry Crow, professor and chair of advanced education at FHSU, recently co-authored an article that has been published in the International Journal of Self-Directed Learning. The article explores the current research on teacher integration of instructional technology in their teaching practices. It points to the potential of self-directed learning activities to address the issues of teachers' struggling and reluctance with instructional technology.

DIGITAL INEQUALITIES AND DIGITAL INCLUSION IN EDUCATION: AN AGENDA FOR THE POST COVID-19 WORLD 2022

Dr. Elodie Jones and Dr. Yaprak Dalat-Ward, AEP faculty members in the College of Education – in coordination with former faculty FHSU member Dr. Babu George – recently published a chapter in the book “Implementing Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Belonging Management in Organizational Change Initiatives.”

PELL GRANTS VITAL TO STUDENT SUCCESS

06/09/22

As a first-generation college student, I know on a deeply personal level the importance of the Fort Hays State University drive to offer the best value in higher education – anywhere! We believe in the transformative power of a college education and how it impacts generations of families and communities.
